Index of Titles and Authors in Environmental Conservation, 1974–86

Compiled by Lynn Curme

Edited by Nicholas Polunin

Foreword by Mostafa K. Tolba

Further to the Notices in recent issues of our Journal, we are now pleased to announce that the above Index is being published forthwith by the Foundation for Environmental Conservation and will be available from the undersigned at the price (including surface postage) of US $30* or 45* Swiss francs from 15 June 1988. It is anticipated that most of our subscribers, at least, will wish to purchase a copy of this Index which, with its 9,399 entries occupying 159 pages in the format of the Journal, will approach twice the basic length of an issue but cost much less.

Referencing, as it does, surely the vast majority of leading Authors and topics that emerged during the formative years of the environmental-conservational movement or 'revolution', this Index should represent a valuable tool for research workers and a propitious guide for writers. This was borne out by our experience during its compilation, when it already proved to be a most useful work of reference, '... altogether constituting a unique chronicle of the environmental-conservational concerns of modern times' (according to the Foreword by the Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme).

Furthermore, we hope (but cannot yet promise, the Index being still underpriced and ourselves not indestructible), to send free-of-charge if possible to all purchasers of this Index, at approximately two-yearly intervals henceforth, supplements to it in each case representing a further two-years' volumes, starting with one as early as possible in 1989 covering the years 1987 and 1988.

* We regret the increase from the earlier-indicated 'likely' and then 'expectation' price which has been necessitated by the Index's much greater-than-expected length, consequently increased cost of postage etc., some inflation and currency fluctuations, and our later expectation of free supplementation at two-yearly intervals, but will of course honour fully those who made commitments to subscribe (and even in a gratifying number of cases paid) at the provisional prices indicated earlier. We will also honour Index subscriptions (if based on an earlier Notice) received or postmarked by 15 June 1988, after which the above price in either currency will, unfortunately, have to prevail. — Ed.
